Dear Friends and Supporters,

I am happy to report 2007 was another successful year for Sustainable Northwest. We continued to ensure the sound management of natural resources and long-term viability of local economies in our region.

In the Northwest, our biggest conservation opportunities are in places where humans and natural landscapes overlap. In these areas, rural communities play a critical role in maintaining the health of the environment and are central to ensuring lasting conservation success.

It is our privilege to work with hundreds of rural partners – small businesses, private landowners, nonprofit organizations and public agencies – who share our belief that strong local stewardship leads to the most effective and lasting restoration and conservation efforts. Our success is proof that when rural communities are included in conservation strategies, the results can be remarkable.

Like you, we recognize that our quality of life is inextricably linked the natural resources around us. Our rivers, forests, rangelands and marine systems provide tremendous economic, cultural, recreational and aesthetic value.

We have made huge strides in land stewardship and conservation in the Northwest, yet many of the pressures on our forests, rangelands and marine systems remain. Although the challenges are formidable, we see great opportunities to create economically viable communities that make more efficient and effective use of natural resources.

With our successful track record, more than a decade of experience, and dedicated staff, no organization in the region is better positioned to help rural communities find a pathway to sustainability than Sustainable Northwest.

Thanks for all you do to support our work.

Sincerely,

Martin Goebel
President
